Port of Anping

Port of Anping is the gateway to Tainan. During the Qing Dynasty, it was the largest harbor in Taiwan, and was also known as "First Tainan, second Lugang, third Bangka". Later, the harbor was affected by sand drifting and gradually declined due to siltation. The government redeveloped port of Anping in order to promote local economic development. Since its upgrading to the status of an international commercial port in 1997, port of Anping has been positioned as an international bulk and general cargo import/export port with both tourism and hydrophilic functions. In recent years, port of Anping has been committed to promoting the development of "Tourism in the North" and "Free Trade in the South" and has gradually completed the layout of the areas of each port in the hope of linking up with the international community, and to comprehensively drive the development of the port of Anping and the related industries, thus creating an overall prosperity for the Tainan area.

Fu'ao Pier District at port of Matsu

The Matsu Islands are located in the northwest of the Taiwan Strait, about 120 nautical miles from Keelung Port. They are adjacent to the Min River estuary in Fujian Province, with a distance of 35 nautical miles from Fuzhou's Mawei Port. Huangqi Port on Beijiao Peninsula is only 8 nautical miles away, making it easily accessible. Port of Fu'ao is the largest port among the islands of Matsu. It serves as the transportation hub for Matsu and operates ferry routes to the four major outlying islands (Beigan, Dongju, Xiju, and Dongyin).

Transportation Information

The ports in Matsu include Nangan Island (Port of Fu'ao), Beigan Island (Port of Baisha), Dongyin Island (Port of Zhongzhu), Dongju Island (Port of Mengao), and Xiju Island (Port of Qingfan). Among them, Nangan Island is the largest island, and you can take a boat from Nangan's port of Fu'ao to reach the other islands.

3 Jinsha Settlement

approximately 10 minutes by car, 5.1 kilometers from Port of Fu'ao

When it comes to stone house architecture, Beigan has Qinbi and Nangan has Jinsha as its representatives. The Jinsha settlement is located at the foot of Yuntai Mountain, in a bay on the southwestern tip of Nangan Island. It is the largest fishing village and settlement closest to the mainland in Nangan. It was originally named "Jinsha" in Chinese due to the abundance of fine golden sand on its beaches. It is a popular destination for enjoying sunsets and strolling along the sandy beach. The village has gained attention for its well-preserved ancient stone houses.

Matsu Zhongzhu Harbor

Zhongzhu Pier District at port of Matsu

Dongyin Island is the northernmost and closest island to Taiwan. It stands alone in the East China Sea, boasting captivating natural landscapes and geological features that truly deserve the title of a national treasure coastline. The main gateway to Dongyin Island is Port of Zhongzhu. Once you step ashore, you will be greeted by the striking statue of the "Dream Fish - Striped Rock Porgy" at the pier, serving as one of the important landmarks on the island. On the northeastern slope of Port of Zhongzhu, you will find densely packed houses, which are usually where visitors to Dongyin settle down and seek local cuisine.

Taitung Fugang Fishery Harbor

The port of Fugang is the second largest port in Taitung County, following Chenggong Fishery Harbor. Plans are underway to expand the port and establish a dedicated pier for transportation vessels called the "Port of Fugang Expansion Transportation Pier." The port accommodates both fishing boats and passenger ships, with separate harbor channels. Due to its proximity to Taitung City, the port has also become a tourist destination with its own unique features. Numerous seafood restaurants can be found in the area, offering freshly caught seafood straight from the port. Together with the nearby Xiaoyeliu and Jialulan Coast, it forms a tourism belt, making it suitable for half-day or one-day trips.

Orchid Island Kaiyuan Fishery Harbor

Kaiyuan Fishery Harbor is located in the Yeyou Village on the west coast of Orchid Island. It serves as the main gateway for Orchid Island to the outside world and is also the port where transportation boats to Port of Fugang in Taitung stop. It primarily serves as a transportation and supply hub for Orchid Island, but it also has a designated fishing pier for local fishing boats, making it a port that serves both transportation and fishing purposes. Port of Kaiyuan is situated on the west coast of Orchid Island, with a concealed topography and a geological formation of coral reefs. It is a lively port and a popular fishing spot among residents.

Transportation Information

Located in Yeyou Village, visitors traveling by ferry or in need of daily supplies for Orchid Island can dock at Port of Kaiyuan. Transportation on the island is dominated by motorcycles or cars.

Recommended Itinerary

It's recommended to choose two to three sites for a tour.

1 Jade Girl Rock

Approximately 11 minutes by car from Port of Kaiyuan, 5.6 kilometers

It's a hollow rock formation that stands at a height of about 20 meters. It is located on the northern coast of Langdao Village. The unique feature of this rock is the small rocks inside the hollow, creating a peculiar and beautiful shape. It is also known as the Couple Rock or Yin-Yang Rock.

- Address: Rock on the northern coast near the coral reef, Orchid Island, Taitung County.
- Nearby attractions: Crocodile Rock, Five-Hole Cave, Orchid Island Paradise

2 Lanyu Weather Station

Approximately 19 minutes by car from Port of Kaiyuan, 9.5 kilometers

Lanyu Weather Station offers the best panoramic view on the island. The white building sits by the clear blue sea, and the expansive view brings a sense of tranquility. From here, you can enjoy a breathtaking view of almost the entire Orchid Island.

- Phone: +886-89-732587
- Address: No. 2 Hongtuo, Orchid Island, Taitung County 952, Taiwan.
- Nearby attractions: Yeyin Village, Dongqing Bay, Yeyin Cold Springs

3 Crocodile Rock

Approximately 8 minutes by car from Port of Kaiyuan, 3.6 kilometers

Crocodile Rock is an independent rock formation formed by volcanic eruption debris. Due to the erosion of seawater from the coral reef and crustal movements, the rock has fractured joints, resembling a crocodile with rough skin and sharp teeth.

- Phone: +886-89-732001
- Address: Northwestern sea area of Orchid Island, Taitung County.
- Nearby attractions: Lanyu Lighthouse, Hongtuo Rock, Five-Hole Cave
